Washington, D.C. – October 8, 2010 – More than 150 of leading women business owners from Women Impacting Public Policy (WIPP) gathered last week to celebrate the recipients of this year's prestigious WIPP 2010 Awards. Terri McNally, Owner and President of Global Capital, Ltd., based in Grayslake, IL, was the recipient of this year's WIPP President's Award because of her ability to successfully use her entrepreneurial experience as a platform for discussions and action regarding women's business issues, veteran's issues, and finance and economic empowerment.

Awards were given to women business owners that exhibited leadership within the women's business community. Terri's continual hard work, dedication, and desire to be the change for women-owned businesses proves to be an inspiration for all.

The WIPP Awards Ceremony was part of WIPP's three day Annual Leadership Conference in Washington, DC that ran from September 27-29th. The conference agenda included important economic briefings on current policy issues impacting women business owners growth, a very special high level briefing by the White House, a Congressional Luncheon, and the exciting unveiling of WIPP's updated Economic Blueprint: The Women Business Owners' Platform for Growth, used as the organization's call to action to the Administration, Congress and Federal Agencies.
